August 25, 2015	Narratives of Success: Insights from Men of Color who Successfully Transferred	Findings from a recent study of men of color who successfully transferred from a community college to a four-year institution will be presented during this webinar. Narratives from these men will discuss the role of institutional personnel and structures in fostering transfer success.	Webinar (Virtual)
September 24, 2015	Information-Sharing Session	This information-sharing session will feature community college leaders who will discuss promising practices being employed by their programs and colleges.	Webinar (Virtual)  *If you are interested in sharing insights that you have learned from your work, please contact Angelica Palacios at m2c3@mail.sdsu.edu
October 22, 2015	Research Update: What the Past 20 Years of Research on Men of Color in the Community College Tells Us	For nearly 20 years, scholars and practitioners have investigated the experiences, perceptions, and outcomes of men of color in the community college. This webinar will synthesize those findings and offer research-based recommendations for practice. Moreover, suggestions for further inquiry on this population will also be extended.	Webinar (Virtual)
November 11, 2015	Serving Those Who've Served Us: Fostering Success for Veteran Men of Color in the Community College	With the winding down of international conflicts in Iraq and Afghanistan, many veterans have returned home. Community colleges often serve as a primary access point for these students into college. This video will focus on how community colleges can construct programs, policies, and practices that are attentive to the needs and assets of veteran men of color.	Video (To Be Distributed to M2C3 Subscriber Listserve)
November 12, 2015	Designing and Implementing Mentoring Programs for Men of Color in Community Colleges	Mentoring has long been used as the primary 'silver bullet' strategy for improving outcomes for men of color. However, too often, mentoring programs do not enhance student success. This webinar will focus on how colleges can best build and implement mentoring programs that foster success for men of color.	Webinar (Virtual)  *Co-Hosted by Duane Reid, Director, of the PBI 4A program at Baltimore City Community College

January 28, 2016	Designing and Implementing Early Alert Systems to Support Success for Men of Color	Early alert systems are used by colleges to intervene when students show signs of impending retention concerns. This webinar will overview different early alert models and provide recommendations on how to best structure systems to foster student success.	Webinar (Virtual)
February 18, 2016	Designing Retention Programming to Address the Influence of Masculine Identities on Success for Community College Men of Color	Research has shown that masculine identities can influence the success of men of color in college. This webinar will discuss how those engaged in retention programming can design and implement efforts to address the influence of masculine identity on success for men of color.	Webinar (Virtual)
March 17, 2016	The Student Athlete: Advancing Success for Male Athletes of Color in the Community College	Large contingents of men of color are concentrated in varsity athletics. However, programming designed to support men of color in the community college often overlooks this segment of men. Promising practices on how community colleges can best support men of color before, during, and after their athletic experiences will be presented in this webinar.	Webinar (Virtual)
April 21, 2016	Microaggressions: Their Influence on Men of Color in Community Colleges	Microaggressions are common, subtle, messages that communicate indignations. Typically, these messages are unconscious in nature. However, racial-gender and sexual orientation microaggressions have an integral influence on students' perceptions of campus climates as hostile, alienating, and isolating. Some of the common microaggressions men of color face in the community college will be discussed in this webinar. Recommendations for faculty, staff, and administrative professional development will also be offered.	Webinar (Virtual)  *Co-Hosted by Robert Chalwell, PhD, Coordinator, of the BCBrothers Achieve program at Broward College, South Campus
